Bio

When the Cowboy, the Biker and the Scientist met for the first time, they were all sitting in an Irish sweating bath.

The Irish sweating bath is usually around a cosy temperature from 122° to 131° Fahrenheit and it also has an aeration, so there is hardly any vapour in the air.

Under these circumstances, it was only a matter of time that our three friends were fond of each other, as they were yet all big fans of the Incredible Animal Band.

There was rhythm, magic and something else in the air, hence the three musicians (who all have very different social backgrounds) founded The Free Electric Band, to show the world that a Cowboy, a Biker and a Scientist (who had already been swamped with prices before) got it going on. Together they play their synthies, vocodies and laptops in a way you have never seen and heard before.

And now, at last, they just started spreading fear, terror and Schranz across Europe!

We recommend you to listen to their very rare early session recordings and to visit their spectacular live shows, because they are going to be the no. 1 priority in 2007 for each true music lover.
